5.1 Conclusion

After the researcher watched, collected data, and analyzed Pokémon Detective Pikachu Movie using a descriptive qualitative method based on Yule's theory about the types of presuppositions obtained from Tim Goodman's utterances and analyzed the meaning with Thomas's theory, the researcher concludes it in the following details:

Based on Tim Goodman's utterance in Pokémon Detective Pikachu Movie, 61 Pressuppositions were found using Yule's presupposition type theory. All of these, the most frequently used are existential presupposition types with a total of 20, then followed by factive presupposition types with a total of 16, then there is non-factive with a total 9, and after that there are 8 lexical presupposition,⁷ structural presupposition, the last is counterfactual presupposition with a total of only 1.

There are 61 data in 6 types of presupposition founded in this movie, from which existential presupposition was with the largest number totaled 21 data, the reason was for this data to be largest contribute to the fact that the main character conversation was focusing on talking about other character existence contributing to this presupposition, with main point this presupposition is easier to find in the character conversation, while counterfactual presupposition was the presupposition with the lowest number that is only one data was found, attributing that the main character conversation was mostly focusing on direct meaning making this type of presupposition was small in number.
